“Heat Stress at Workplace – Assessment & Remedial Measures”
(12th to 14th Aug, 2024)

About the Course/Training Programme:

Heat stress is a significant occupational hazard, at workplace where workers are exposed to high temperatures and humidity levels. It occurs when the body's mechanisms for regulating body temperature are overwhelmed, leading to a range of health effects that can impact productivity, safety and well-being. Effective assessment and remedial measures are essential for mitigating the risk associated with heat stress in the workplace.

By understanding the causes of heat stress, its assessment and implementing appropriate remedial measures, management can create safer and healthier environment for their employees.
